2. Purpose and legal basis

It is a precondition for our processing of your personal data to be lawful that there is a legal basis for this, i.e. that it is necessary to perform a contract with you or a legal obligation to which we are subject, or that the processing is done following a balance of interests or that you have given your consent to specific processing. The following are examples of the purposes for which we process your personal data and the legal basis on which this is done.

One of our primary purposes for collecting personal data is to perform and administer our assignments, more precisely in order to perform obligatory disqualification checks, check identity and ownership structure, comply with money laundering and terrorist financing regulations, keep ourselves informed about the circumstances in a specific matter, protect the interests of you or your organisation, for reporting and invoicing purposes and also, as regards personal data from our business partners, to administer and perform contractual obligations.

We may also use the personal data to adapt our services and service offering, business and method development, market analysis, statistics and risk management.

Legal basis: Legitimate interest.

We may use data about you to provide news information and marketing related to our services, both general and client-specific, and inform you about new relevant legislation, our activities or services. We may thus use the data about you for direct marketing, unless you/your organisation have instructed us not to do this. To the extent that you do not have an active customer relationship with us and are a consumer, however, we will only use your data for electronic direct marketing if you have consented to this.

Legal basis: Legitimate interest or consent where expressly stated.

You have an opportunity at any time to object to us using your personal data for marketing purposes by contacting us in the manner described in Clause 9 below, or directly in our electronic mailing.

You are also entitled, in the manner prescribed by law, to have the data about you erased or request that we restrict the processing of your personal data and also withdraw any consent. You are also entitled, in the manner prescribed by law, to have the personal data you provided to us transferred (ported).

Please note that it may be required that we retain necessary personal data in conjunction with erasure, withdrawal of consent or porting to be able to fulfil our obligations by law or contract. It may also be permitted for us according to law to retain certain personal data to satisfy our business needs.

You are entitled to object to such processing of your personal data that we do pursuant to a balance of interests. We must then, after you have specified the processing to which you are objecting, demonstrate that there are overriding interests.
